

Just want my opinion made public that the incident at halftime of the Super Bowl this weekend was horrendous! There is absolutely no excuse for it. If CBS, MTV, and the NFL can declair themselves blameless because they had in no way approved such as this, then tell me, please, how they could have possibly approved a song with lyrics that read "I'm gonna have you naked by the end of this song." What place does a song like that have in the halftime celebration at a football game, and what kind of message is that sending. Those in decision-making positions certainly knew what song was going to be sung. Why are they now so surprised at what happened! These individuals have no backbone, no moral fiber, no guts at all in their decision-making positions. They are the ones who have been made out as fools.
